

Dan Pitkin
NIST Manufacturing Extension Partnership

Dan Pitkin is a Business & Technology Advisor with U.S. Department of Commerce, NIST Manufacturing Extension Partnership, a national outreach and assistance federal program with 60 Centers and 1500 field staff in every state and Puerto Rico.

Currently, Dan is the MEP program manager for Lean Product Development, the NIST-USPTO collaboration on IP Rights management and protection, Energy-efficient management systems with the U.S. Council on Energy Efficient Manufacturing, lean and sustainable product design and technology commercialization. He has served as Liaison officer for MOU collaboration between the Departments of Commerce and Defense's Office of Technology Transition to connect U.S. manufacturers with Federal Labs for the transfer, transition, acquisition and deployment of advanced technologies that enhance warfighter capabilities.

Dan is a Cornell engineer with over twenty years of private sector executive management plus eight years of federal government program management, interagency collaborations, and public-private partnerships. Dan has extensive management experience in both government and industry with product design and development, technology transfer and transition, rapid prototyping, manufacturing systems, business development and commercialization.